Our Story

The Nature of Wildworks was founded by Mollie Hogan to provide lifetime care for non-releasable wild animals and to engender public respect and concern for nature through interactive wildlife educational presentations. Since its inception in 1995, Wildworks has been a premier provider of programs that enhance the public's understand of our local natural environment.

The animals at our Wildlife Center are cared for by staff and volunteers who understand the deep bond between people and nature. The animal population at Wildworks presently includes such diverse species as the mountain lion, wolf, bobcat, serval, fox, kinkajou, owl, hawk, opossum, coyote and squirrel. Most of the species represented are native to California and were either acquired from zoos, confiscated as illegally owned "pets" or rescued as orphaned or injured wildlife.

The Nature of Wildworks strives to build public respect and concern for native wildlife and the California environment through student programs that meet California schools' curriculum mandates. A variety of successful educational programs have been developed and are presented in schools and public settings throughout Los Angeles and Ventura Counties.

Selected trained wild animals are brought into the classroom or group setting for presentations designed to teach children about local or exotic wildlife and their habitats and current environmental issues. These programs allow children to experience animals firsthand and to gain through these close encounters a greater appreciation of the world around them.

The Nature of Wildworks

is a celebration of all the remarkable, diverse creatures with whom we are privileged to share this life on earth.

Caring for the individual wild animals at our center and sharing them with you, allows all of us to realize and appreciate that every creature roaming freely in the wild has its own distinct personality and is deserving of its own fair chance at life.
